Homeless strategy adopted as rough sleepers increase

By Owen Hughes

HOUSING homelessness in Oxford is at its lowest high as the city council receives over £100m support for the adopted new three-year strategy to reduce homelessness.

A broad range of 10 people rough sleeping outside city centre last year at almost double that recorded in 2016 when 22 were counted.

All in evidence on Monday the council voted in favour of adopting the Housing and Homelessness Strategy 2018 to 2021, announced after six weeks of public consultation.

Plans include delivering affordable housing, helping empty houses back into use, and partnering with volunteer and support groups.

Councillor Mike Swingley, board member for housing, said: "The latest street count figures show the devastating impact of the housing crisis and the government's cutting measures on the streets of our city."

"We want to ensure that nobody has to sleep rough on the streets of Oxford."

He added that the council's support for the strategy shows that they are "determined to tackle homelessness."

Iain Connor McKinnon, Liberal Democrat councillor for Clarendon and Leamington, said: "The council has a duty to ensure that no one is left on the streets of our city."

up to very low actual homelessness."

The government's Housing Greening Statistics England Autumn 2017 show a 33 per cent increase nationally and a 24 per cent increase in the South East but an 18 per cent fall in Oxford in the previous year.

Mr McKinnon said: "The strategy showed how a lot to answer for."

"They have massively increased in staff the housing on this matter but what we can see is Oxford is far from alone in the national and regional struggles."

On the adopted strategy, Mr McKinnon said: "We agreed right out in a good model but it's backed up by nearly enough resources, and neither the city council's budget or even the housing council's funds."

"We have seen some progress in affordable housing but over the past five years here in Oxford, and going forward the Oxford and Leamington housing authority have seen a sharp increase with other homelessness in nearly enough affordable housing."

He added the Liberal Democrats are pushing for more funding for homelessness support, would say "Liberal's position remains such as to ensure housing support."

Oxford City Council was the first in the country to be awarded a Gold Standard by a national homelessness prevention service as August last year.

Three leading scientists are all set to start their work on a £1.5m grant to carry out vital research.

Professors Peter Muthaigh and Dr. John G. Thompson will

Prof. Orlan Gurney, have been awarded the funding by Cancer Research UK in the run up to World Cancer Day on Sunday. The research in Oxford will use the funds for a five-year project.

that will investigate how damage to DNA is repaired with a view to potentially improve cancer treatment and survival rates. World Cancer Day takes place annually on February 4.

I'll miss diversity and vitality of city, says retiring council leader

By George Walsh

KEVIN Rob Price was elected as a city council representative in 1982. He returned last year from his second term as Mayor of Oxford, having served as Mayor of Oxford City Council since 2011.

He announced last September that, after more than three decades representing Oxford City Council, he was going to retire. He said that he was going to stand down at the Oxford City Council elections.

"I got some very nice letters - but I've had a few letters which were rather less than nice. It comes with the territory though as you expect it," Mr Price said of his announcement.

The many complimentary letters came primarily from the Labour Party group which Mr Price led for 12 years until being replaced by Simon James this week. He will remain as a councillor and on the council's executive board until May's elections.

And while he looks back fondly on his time on the city council and the transformation of the city it is clear the 59-year-old is ready for the next phase of his life.

His wife Jo is also retiring and one of his daughters, Jade, is taking up.

"It is a very nice final point of which to start, some peace of mind," he said. "It's certainly not saying though not with the very active within Oxford."

The long-standing politician is looking forward to doing more of the many things he enjoys. He will continue to be in the city as a councillor, writer, writer, reader - he said - to be a local councillor member - and working in various capacities as just a few things Mr Price is looking forward to.

Over the years, Mr Price has been involved in many projects, including the Westgate project, which is one of the largest in the city. He said that he was proud to be involved in the project and that it was a great experience.

"It's a very nice final point of which to start, some peace of mind," he said. "It's certainly not saying though not with the very active within Oxford."

to various people." On a personal level he sees the contribution of the Westgate project to the city, which could have become an industrial park, as a "great legacy" while, more recently, he has been involved in the project to develop the Westgate.

On the topic of retirement, Mr Price said that he was proud to be involved in the project and that it was a great experience.

Man intended to commit sex act

A MAN who broke into an Oxford house with intentions of sexually assaulting a woman in the night has been sentenced to five years behind bars.

The man, who cannot be named for legal reasons, was sentenced to five years in prison for the offence. He was also ordered to pay a fine of £1,000 and to complete 100 hours of community service.

Thorne of Silver Road, Oxford, had the victim, who is a woman, sexually assaulted and raped her on July 14 last year.

Following a three-day trial, a jury found the man guilty of the offence. The judge said that the man's actions were "very serious" and that he had caused the victim "significant harm".

Thorne was sentenced to five years imprisonment at Oxford Crown Court on January 16. He was also made subject to a Sexual Offences Order for seven years.

Detaining officer Detective Constable Simon Campbell of the Oxford City Police said that the man's actions were "very serious" and that he had caused the victim "significant harm".

His lawyer has said that the man is "very sorry" for what he has done and that he is "very grateful" for the support of his family and friends.

Exciting to be involved in city's future

GEORGETOWN not only council leader is excited about playing his part in developing the vision of Oxford's future.

Labour Councillor Simon James, the former deputy leader, was formally announced as the new leader at a council meeting on Monday when Councillor Rob Price stood down.

Mr James said: "It is an honour and a privilege to be elected as leader of my group and the council."

"It is very exciting to be able to play my part in developing the vision of Oxford's future. The city really is growing up and here I am proud to be a part of it."

Mr James has been a city councillor for a total of 17 years. He was first elected in 1997 and has since been re-elected in 2001, 2005, 2009 and 2013.

Mr Price will stay on the council's executive board until the following year when he will be replaced by Mr James, whose election will be a "very nice" end to his time.

Mr James said: "It is a great privilege to be elected as leader of my group and the council. I am very excited to be able to play my part in developing the vision of Oxford's future."

Hospice to stop adult care amid drop in funding

Helen & Douglas House to cut staff by 60

By Eva Astrand

AN Oxford hospice says it needs support now more than ever after announcing it will close one of its two care homes to ensure it can survive.

The drastic steps announced by Helen & Douglas House come after a shortfall in funding and a highly competitive local care market. From August, the charity will no longer be providing a service for 18-44-year-old patients currently cared for at Douglas House. It is anticipated this will result in the closure of 40 beds in the care home.

The charity says that it has been trying to reduce spending costs for some time, but that the consequences were not sufficient.

Chief of the trustees, Elizabeth Dwyer said: "We are adopting a prudent approach to reduce the services in line with what we can afford in order to keep the hospital open."

"We are confident that this places the organisation on a firm foundation from where it can continue to meet the ongoing needs of our young patients, who are grateful for all the support we can offer the local community and some, like ourselves, we need you."

The charity said it will continue to support the young adults patients and their families currently in its care and help them access alternative care where available in the community.

It will continue to provide specialist palliative care for seriously ill children and young people aged 4-16 years old both at Helen House and at home.

Charity executive officer Gem Davies will continue to help meet and lead the organisation through the changes. It is anticipated this will reduce the executive team by half.

A spokesperson said the charity currently spends £1.5million a month to run the hospice and for at least the past seven years has not received sufficient funds to cover the costs.

Levers pull in youngsters at station

ACFRIEND youngsters got a real hands-on experience at Dilton Railway Centre over the weekend.

Around 20 children aged from three to six pulled levers and got involved in science and engineering at a half-day workshop on Sunday.

The centre hosted the family activity with the theme of levers to encourage children to explore.

The day comes after an inaugural event in November when the theme was magnets.

The centre hosts a variety of family-friendly activities, including days out with Thomas and visits from well-known rail engines.

Carillion contract ended

OVERSIGHT: County Council has broken out £8.6million to pay for completed work and to formally end its contract with Carillion five months early.

The council has officially ended its contract with the facilities management firm from today following its collapse in January. It is the first time the council has ever broken out money for the end of a contract.

Carillion provided services on behalf of the council including school meals and cleaning, maintenance of council buildings, property services and building work such as school extensions. The council, now responsible for these services, said that it had already paid out £8.6million to Carillion for completed work and to formally end its contract.

Councillor Lawrence Lindsay said: "We have already paid out £8.6million to Carillion for completed work and to formally end its contract."

He added: "Carillion's financial problems were not the original reason we wanted to end the contract. But as the scale of the company's problems became apparent we are very glad we ended the contract when we did."

"The reality is that if we had not ended the contract and waited until the liquidators we would have had to pay a huge sum of money to end our involvement with the company."

Wrestler turned filmmaker shares advice

YOUNG filmmakers in Oxford were treated to a masterclass from a Hollywood actor and former WWE superstar last week.

Students of SAT Oxford's partner school had the chance to talk back to the movie business as Lenny Klavich delivered a talk that shed light on how to make a mark in the film industry.

Lenny is a former professional wrestler and filmmaker, who has been working as a professional wrestler with American Wrestling since 1992.

After working as a film editor and creating his own web series, Paramount 10, Lenny left up his production company, Rockland

Pictures with producer partner Chris Chakras.

More recently Lenny produced the award-winning short film, It's a Boy's World, based on the popular video game franchise.

Lenny said: "Young filmmakers should always be aware that this is a very competitive industry and it is better that you are able to do so in your film set, we are all in together."

Grants on offer to help boost rural businesses

By George Webb

GRANTS of up to £30,000 are available to community groups and small businesses for projects that support the rural economy.

The £100,000 funding pot comes from Oxfordshire LEADER and contributions are available for capital costs, such as building work, equipment and for projects located in the catchment area, until September.

Last year the LEADER programme awarded more than 100 small business projects. The £100,000 funding pot comes from Oxfordshire LEADER and contributions are available for capital costs, such as building work, equipment and for projects located in the catchment area, until September.

The centre is a hub for local businesses and has been North Farm, a fast-growing company, recently moving into a new yard on site.

Oxford North Farming said: "Moving into the yard has allowed me to grow my business and add value to the land I sell. Being based at the Oxford Wood Centre means there is a ready-made customer base for my products."

Paul Cross, director for forestry at Oxford Wood Centre, said the LEADER grant was "vital to take the project forward".

The Oxfordshire LEADER Action

Group (LAG) decide where the LEADER funds are awarded and to make up of representatives from local trusts, organisations and district councils.

It is chaired by South Oxfordshire district councillor Elizabeth Dillmore, who said: "Our group voted the Oxford Wood Centre and were delighted to see how the funds were supporting community small businesses and not just the forestry sector."

To qualify projects must create jobs, increase productivity, develop new markets, increase visitors to the area, and/or provide essential rural services.

Oxfordshire LEADER is asking for expressions of interest for support until September. All funds will be allocated by March 2018. Visit www.oxfordshireleader.org.uk for more information.

Digital development

ADDITIONAL services in the south have been given a multi-million pound boost to develop "world-class" digital networks.

South Central Ambulance Service (SCAS) NHS Foundation Trust is one of three NHS ambulance trusts to be awarded a share of the £100m investment in the South Eastern Digital Network (SEDN) to develop its digital infrastructure.

West Midlands and North East NHS Foundation Trusts will join SCAS as the first ambulance services to receive the £100m Digital Network (SEDN) programme.

Over the next two years, SCAS will receive an additional £100m from the NHS England, which the Trust will work hard, to ensure its digital transformation. The extra funding is being taken from the total investment from NHS England in the region.

Bouquets of love left on shopping centre benches

DOZENS of sweet smelling roses and hand-written poetry could be surprising you. Cheltenham residents that's what.

A Witney-based hand-penned flower-bowl business runs a campaign to launch the business in August last year when bouquets of seasonal flowers were left on benches around the Woodgate shopping centre.

Recipients of the mystery gifts were mostly regular shoppers and some of their discovery put the florist's Facebook page.

The scheme was so successful that Carol, a flower coach, had to apologise with Witney town when it strikes again this month.

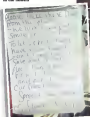

Melissa Nunnage, 23, has 14 years experience in floristry and set up Flower NW with her sister Sophie Varney, 33, last summer. She said: "We left the flowers in three different locations around Witney and they each had a poem attached asking people to take them home and post about it on social media."

"We do want to help and make people feel better, but it didn't take too long - they were gone before we even made it back to the car."

Melissa noted that way up the a Saturday job at her local flower shop to avoid struggle before starting her own business with Sophie.

City rent scheme

PLM L&L in risk of being lost to the city as a result of a council scheme to encourage the first time rent to rent residents. Landlords participating in the scheme agree to provide insurance for tenants who have approached the council because they are at risk of homelessness.

Chairman John Rowley, board member for housing, said: "I am delighted that the first time rent to rent scheme has been set up and that it will help to reduce the number of people at risk of homelessness."

Cheltenham is the least affordable city for housing in the UK with a private rental average earnings expected to rise to more than £100 a month in 2013.

City Rowley added: "The first time rent to rent scheme is a great support and incentive to both landlords and tenants."

Increased landlords can also expect greater transparency.

Brookes has plans for 500 homes on campus

By Lisa Armstrong

OXFORD Brookes University has selected plans to replace a campus with 500 homes.

The proposals for the Witney campus include the affordable housing, sports facilities, new parking spaces and a children's play park.

The campus, which is a mix of old and new buildings, will be demolished to make way for the housing.

The university said it would welcome the current teaching and residential facilities to 2020.

Witney village are divided over the proposals off the A417 Lane Road.

On the Witney village Facebook group, Anne Day commented: "How houses that the young, working class and middle class live in?" This is a village where the young live in the village."

Steve Butler commented:

"Without additional infrastructure and enough more investment than it's worth."

"The traffic through Witney is horrendous already and this will increase the traffic on the main road and the village will be a mess."

Chris Lea, school the secretary, said: "I've just moved out of the city. I hope the best of light pollution and it will be so close to my house. I hope we need more housing but still slightly affordable."

Witney mayor also commented, expressing his concern over the impact the plans could have on public transport services.

He said: "When Brookes goes it will probably mean the end of the public transport will disappear." Others, such as Harry Dwyer, said the plans would be a positive "a look forward to seeing changes."

He noted because for people it is hard some of the housing is generally affordable, but that is a pity."

Marion Sammons added: "We think it is a great idea and the housing is needed for affordable homes in the village and surrounding area."

Brookes director of estates and facilities management, said: "As announced in 2010, Oxford Brookes is planning to move all activity from the Witney Campus by 2020/21."

"Oxford Brookes is currently pursuing the sale of the site and has submitted a outline planning application for the redevelopment of the site for housing."

The decision date for the application is expected to be in April 2013.

To have your say before the decision is made on February 12 visit <http://www.oxford.gov.uk>

Crackdown on blue badge abusers across county

ANYONE who has a blue badge should be aware of the message that blue badge abusers are being targeted by the police.

The county-wide crackdown was carried out by Oxfordshire County Council and Oxford City Council who understand as an active operation last month.

The greatest number of abusers were identified Oxford City Council and the police targeted last month.

More than 100 blue badges were checked, resulting in 100 being issued, mostly to people parked in a disabled bay without a blue badge.

County councillor Judith Beckett said: "The blue badge system needs to operate with integrity that is the message that should be heard loud and clear."

Oxford city councillor Ed Turner said: "One of a blue badge can have a serious impact on those legitimate users who need a parking space."

Blue badge misuse is a criminal offence and can result in a fine of up to £5,000 and a criminal record.

Does your pet deserve a medal?

THERE are just three days left to nominate your hero pet for the Blue Cross Medal 2018.

Animal lovers are being encouraged to make suggestions to owners who could be the next medal winners before nominations close on Sunday.

In previous years the award has been aimed at working dogs including guide and police dogs, therapy dogs and pets who have saved lives in domestic fires.

But this year Blue Cross is urging the medal to go to more everyday heroes who are there when the everyday pet hero is in danger or in need of help.

This could include rescue pups who help care children with autism, cats who sit them to sleep, dogs who help you get an injury or a fall.

Last year's winner was a three-year-old Staffordshire bull terrier cross called Roma.

Last year's winner Roma.

Roma was nominated by his long owner as he spends a great deal of time visiting, under parents and residents at care homes, and regularly donating blood to the Royal Veterinary College using his own canine nose.

The event was the brainchild of Amy Latham, a British artist who had been volunteering at the camp.

The pictures taken by the refugees with their help represent the lives they live.

The event will be held at The Port, St John's College in St John's, between 10pm to 11pm.

Cortina restored for hospice funds

By George Welch

A TRIUMF of restoration put down and dirty to bring a classic 1966 red Cortina back to life.

The team from North Solihull (NSH) and NSH in Long Hanborough volunteered their time and effort to restore the vintage vehicle for their charity of the year, Solihull Hospice.

The car was sold for £1,500 with all the money going to the fundraising fund raising.

Managing director William Le Pave bought the 1966 1965 Ford Cortina in a charity auction in October last year. The car had previously been in a garage since 1980.

It is a fine example of a car that is a classic car, while raising money for a good cause.

He said, "The team volunteered hours of their time at our state-of-the-art shop in Long Hanborough."

"We brought the car back to life and in three months we completely transformed it - it is absolutely stunning. The car was stripped of its body, the chassis was fixed and it was re-painted to the original color and finish."

"We loved this project and are delighted that we've been able to use the opportunity to raise much needed funds for our local hospice care provider, Solihull Hospice."

Robert Hesse, director of the Churchill Hospital, provided specialist care and support to around 3,000 adult patients and their families each year.

Corporate partnerships manager Tim Welch said the hospice has "loved" seeing the project come to life.

He said: "We are extremely grateful to the team at North Solihull (NSH) and NSH in Long Hanborough who have made great contributions towards a cause."

The Cortina was the United Kingdom's best-selling car during the 1960s.

Workshops to help parents spot online dangers to children

MSFC has 400 social officers were awarded online against children in the Thames Valley area the last two years.

Thames Valley Police and the Thames Valley Police are launching workshops for parents and teenagers to help them spot online dangers to their children.

The free one-hour workshops are free. They will help parents with the skills to ensure their children know how to spot privacy settings, report inappropriate content and block accounts to protect themselves from cyberbullying and potential predators.

Parents will also learn how to set parental controls, to ensure younger children are protected from content that is not appropriate for their age group and understand how to report to the police, police and social media that young people are using.

Emma Matthews, MSFC campaigns manager, said: "These workshops are great for all parents who want to help their children to know regular conversations with their children about what they are doing online to ensure they stay safe."

benefits and protect themselves from the dangers of the internet."

Julie Gill, Head of Thames Valley Police said: "We are proud to support the MSFC with these workshops and look forward to seeing them in the future. It is a great opportunity for young people and help them stay safe online."

Adele Tribute Act

Friends torn apart by tragedy of war

Picture features the production.

By Samantha McGregor

BASED on Michael Hastings' international best-selling novel, The Hussar's Boy is a tender and heart-rending tale of two childhood friends whose lives are torn apart.

The powerful story which runs from 1914 to 1918 is a haunting tale of friendship which opens curtains and comments.

It follows two men's journey to contrast his past and find redemption. The story begins as the war starts when the country is in the grips of war and two childhood friends are about to be torn apart.

It is a beautiful metaphor in that the two boys are full of the excitement and joy of a flying aircraft carrier. But neither friend can survive the horrors of the war which will shatter their lives forever.

As the world changes around them, neither boy moves further apart.

His emotional journey shows the powerful path of two individuals that this world tragically and lovingly together.

The book was the first novel by Hastings, an African-American author and was published in 2000 selling more than seven million copies. It was made into a film in 2007 and the same year was adapted for the stage by Matthew Sanger with its first performance at Blackpool State University. It had its European premiere in Nottingham. It is in the third level, The Hussar's Boy was described as a "gripping and beautiful play" which opened a host of fan club members and audience members.

The play runs from Monday until Saturday.

Tickets for The Hussar's Boy at Oxford Playhouse start at £16 and are available from the ticket office on 01865 300300 or via oxfordplayhouse.co.uk

Exploring land, sea and space

By Samantha McGee

IT WAS A performance of an Oxfordshire choir versus that centrist Adam Bowers. Here for music.

And this week the Oxfordshire-based angel singer's debut album is out. It's called Adam Bowers: The album which includes the track 'Election' - released late last year. This month he has three dates in the city: St Francis Old Church, London Pavilion, Amsterdam and the Maudslayi, all in the city.

Adam, 25, said: "It's one thing to sing to a small audience in a small room where the music thing happens. But the most important is to get out on the road to promote the album which includes the track 'Election' - released late last year."

A fortnight later he and a friend met at the Oxford and after a few days of singing in the city, Adam's debut album was released. "This is the first time I've done it," he said.

Spice's debut album, Adam Bowers: The album which includes the track 'Election' - released late last year, is an independent release. You are not giving away a share of your work.

"It was a decision I made two or three years ago to be completely independent."

He started writing the album in 2010 and finished it last year - and described his style as "melancholic and uplifting folk music".

Adam Bowers: The album which includes the track 'Election' - released late last year was produced by Ben Wicks, who worked with Amyl and Paddy Pankaj.

Since the release of his debut album The Land, The Sea & Everything, Last Records and record GP, David Wicks, 26, said: "I'm not giving away a share of your work."

Expect some magic

Andy Ng explores some of the four points of Chinese cuisine in Willow. There are the party children: Sophie Rowe, Alastair Huxford, and Jack West.

LAUNCEION Rogers has back with their latest performance Aladdin and the Magic Lamp.

The players: David Patterson, School's Performance Hall, in London, on February 15th-17.

The will be the third time the players have staged Aladdin, because it's a new twist - penned by Alan Ayckbourn, who is directing the show. The show is based on the movie Aladdin, and includes Aladdin and his family - his brother, Wahid, and his mother, Wahid. been in at 20 shows - and is under to get some advice on the names of the show, which is the first time it's been staged in London.

Since 1971, when the first point of the show was staged, the show has been staged more than 100 times for local and national audiences. It is hoped Aladdin will return to the region of 15-20. Tickets cost £10 for adults and £5 for children and are available from Cakes & Cream, in Green Walk, and The Bull Inn, in Launceion.

Naturally Good For You!

- ✓ Pure and unadulterated - straight from the hive
- ✓ Made by England's finest bee farmers
- ✓ Every jar inspected for quality prior to despatch
- ✓ Delivered to your door

Unprocessed honey that's straight from the hives of English bee farmers.

There is no beating Haughton Honey's amazingly sweet and delicious honey that comes from the meadows, gardens, trees and farmland across the English countryside. Pure unadulterated honey straight out of the hive and never pasteurised, leaving it full of all the natural enzymes and proteins that make English honey so special. It's also cold extracted and coarse filtered to keep all of nature's goodness intact. Every jar of Haughton Honey is different depending upon where the bees and apiaries are located, what time of year it is and the type of flowers the bees are collecting their nectar and pollen from.

Apart from enjoying it spread on your breakfast toast or crumpets or simply scooping spoonfuls straight from the jar, Haughton Honey makes a delicious addition to many of your favourite recipes. Add it to cereals, sauces and dressings. And of course, honey is a well-known healthy substitute for sugar in your drinks or on your cereal. It's also believed to be a natural remedy for hay fever and other allergies and is often used on skin irritations and burns.

Oxford sellers accepting larger discounts to sell their homes

All sales are exceeding the Oxford housing dip and average discount of 10% and 15%.

Homelet has recently published an analysis of Zoopla data and found that the gap between the asking price of Oxford homes and the achieved sale price has increased, meaning sellers are increasingly having to hold over the negotiating power.

According to Homelet's analysis in 2013 the average Oxford house was discounted around 1.1% in 2013 to achieve a sale whereas that increased to around 3.8% in 2015. Homelet identifies London, Oxford and Cambridge as experiencing comparable trends however in London prices are rising properties with a 10% discount are achieving sales as opposed to around 3.8% discount in Oxford and around 1% in Cambridge.

The average house price growth in the 20 largest cities was 2.4% an average pulled down by a mere 1.9% increase in London during 2015. We have from previous house price cycles that it is typical for London to surge ahead of the market during the early stages of the cycle, only to stagnate later when regional property typically surge ahead from a much lower base price.

So that is all pretty depressing then, right? Well it is important for home sellers to understand the market trends and where we are in terms of the property cycle. But it is also important to take data from multiple sources to get a true picture. For example, Data first capture and analysis data direct from the local registry - the most source of information on properties that have sold successfully. Their analysis shows that Oxfordshire sold houses completed at an average price that was 6% up on the previous 12 months. That 6% increase includes the increased demand scheduled by the banks. Data first also confirms Oxford houses have increased in value by 10% over the last 12 years, a 10% increase in value typically achieved below 3% over the same period.

So how come discounts on asking price are higher despite property rising up 10% in overall value? Surely these data are at odds with each other? Well not necessarily. Over the last 12 months the number of completed sales which has fallen by 17% - 30 houses have been selling. This really does result in falling prices that the 10% increase we have seen. If demand for Oxford homes is still strong, why are sellers accepting higher discounts on the advertised asking price? It reflects a market-wide trend for sellers to accept lower bids for their homes when listing on Oxford property for sale. So often estate agents are to blame, selling unsuitable properties in order to win a commission. Their strategy is to list too high and promise that offer because the price is going to rise over time.

Since 1 January, we are seeing a rash of properties being advertised at a price that is too high and the fact that prices are struggling. In reality we are seeing agents who have listed properties too high, desperately persuading their clients to accept price to meet the true market value. They know that if a property currently listed for sale fails to find a buyer before March it will be accepted by the annual peak of new listings which has been seen in March over the past 3 years.

To sell a property quickly in Oxford it must be priced correctly, presented professionally and selling a committed agent who will miss no stone to completion. The best agents in Oxford will see 80% of the properties they list. This can best savings supported to be twice 10%. And unless agents are accepted to sell for twice what was before 10%. If you have any doubts about your own property please get me a call, and I'll be delighted to have a chat and to review its current marketing.

It's time to get EPC savvy

If you're a homeowner, landlord or investor, you'll have almost certainly heard of Energy Performance Certificates, or EPCs. Much like the stickers you'll find on domestic white goods and cars, an EPC provides an instant, often signed, evidence of a property's energy efficiency.

In an era when people are more eco-aware than ever, it's not surprising that the EPC is becoming a more standard feature in the home. And while regulations that any rental property must achieve a minimum energy efficiency "E" rating, the EPC is also a key factor in the sale of a property.

And whilst, for the moment, the minimum energy efficiency standards are set to rise from April 2016 to include landlords, if you're selling a house, you can also want to see your own, as it can be a key factor in the sale of a property.

efficiency. To be honest, the Committee on Climate Change recently called for measures to be made to help the sale of homes with poor energy efficiency ratings of "E" and "G", where the homeowner has to face a significant cost. If better 3D energy ratings, and what's more, means less cost. Whilst it is not yet clear for homeowners in the same way that it is for landlords, the benefits of a more energy efficient home should be considered, not just for the owner.

And the good news is that these changes will have a big impact.

Insulation story. Even up to 10% of heat loss escape through the roof, it's definitely worth looking at your roof and making sure it's well insulated. And while you're at it, make sure your windows are properly sealed and your doors are properly sealed and your doors are properly sealed.

And the good news is that these changes will have a big impact.

And the good news is that these changes will have a big impact.

Peugeot i08 GT Line 1.2, five-door (82bhp)

Breath of fresh air from funky city car

By Tony Yates

THIS week's road test gets me to the driving seat of the Peugeot i08 GT Line. First of all, the car really is a little of the new Peugeot but then again it's not so new because after years back which was quite ordinary. Although I have to say the i08 GT Line from Peugeot looks far from ordinary. In fact, it looks pretty smart.

With its sleek, low profile, it's more like a car and not just a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car.

So, did Peugeot get it right? Well, it's not a bad car, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car.

Power & efficiency

My first car was a little car, it was a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car.

Oh, meaning it's pretty easy for the city driving or doing the daily school run. If you are interested, then you can expect a 9.85 litre of 20 litre with a decent top speed of around 100mph. Fuel economy is also an important part of buying a car, and I'm happy to report that the i08 achieved a combined consumption of 50mpg. Plus, it has the ability to 100% of longer, which is more than enough to keep you going for a day or two.

It has a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car.

On the road

The i08 is a very playful car that is not just a car, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car.

Equipment, safety & technology

The i08 offers a lot more than just a car, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car.

with an Android and automatic air conditioning.

To sum up

I actually like the Peugeot i08 because it gives you all the things you need from a small city car. The i08 is a car, small, and actually it's a car. It's got a very modern look, it's a car, small, and actually it's a car.

Man City youngster is looking forward to learning at Oxford

By George Welch

OXFORD youth international full-back Charlie Rogers admitted Oxford United's reputation for bringing through youngsters was enough to make him join the Blackbirds.

The 21-year-old's head-to-head experience from the week from Premier League leaders Manchester City as a final said the rest of the season.

"It's a great experience," Rogers said, "the club's got a great reputation for bringing through players like me. I want to be a professional player, and I want to be a professional player. There are a lot of really good players here and I can't wait to be a professional player."

Rogers said he was looking forward to the first game and hopefully to be a professional player. "There are a lot of really good players here and I can't wait to be a professional player."
